Many Congratulations Gilmore

Yesterday marked the 50th year of wedded life for Mr. and Mrs. J. Lester Gilmore of East Fairview avenue, one of the oldest and best-known couples of Connelville. On account of so many friends, no invitations were issued for the celebration, but during the day possibly a hundred or more, including neighbors and friends from other cities, poured into the home and extended congratulations. At noon a turkey dinner was served by their three daughters, Misses Beniah and Mae and Mrs. Catherine Reed of Beaver. Covers were laid for 15. The table was a large banquet of pink roses and a cake baked by little Helen Wood of South Prospect street. Favors were small pink and white baskets with wedding bells on them. Numerous valuable gifts and floral tributes were received by Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore as remembrances of the happy occasion.

The remainder of the day was given over to a reception. The members of the Martha Norton Little Class of the First Christian Church held a shower for Mrs. Gilmore in the form of booklets congratulating her. Among the guests present were Mrs. Sallie Woodward, sister of Mrs. Gilmore, who is 40 years old, and a brother, C. H. Scott, of Dayton, Ohio, 34 years old; Mr. and Mrs. P. R. James and daughter, Dorothy, and Mrs. Ray Boyd of Greensburg, and Miss Jennie Moranda of Indianapolis, Ind. On account of pressing business, a son, J. S. Gilmore of Denver, Colo., was unable to be present, but sent a number of gifts. Mrs. Gilmore was a daughter of Wilson and Ann Scott of New Salem and her marriage to Mr. Gilmore took place at New Salem September 25, 1873, and was solemnized by Rev. Fulton. Mr. Gilmore was born and reared in Connelville and is a descendant of the pioneers of this region. Both are enjoying splendid health.

PROPOSED REGULATION OF COAL.

In contrast with nationalization or government ownership of coal mines producers and shippers of this essential commodity are disposed to concede that some form of regulation is desirable or necessary. They are not, however, ready to accept, without certain well defined reservations and exceptions, the recommendation of the United States Coal Commission that the industry be placed under the administrative control of a special division of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

In the first place, this regulatory body is constituted solely for the purpose of dealing with matters having to do with transportation—not with the production of coal and even more complex problem of producing a commodity which is a very large factor in transportation.

All the activities, the precedents established, the principles governing decisions, orders and rulings, and everything having to do with the commerce body have been in the single direction of regulating, not creating, commerce between the states. There may be, and is, some relation between the two functions but that relation is not of a kind that seems to the coal industry to warrant the experiment of subjecting both transportation and coal to regulation by the same body.

The Coal Commission's report gives no details as to how the special division of the Interstate Commerce Commission shall be constituted, or to what extent its powers shall be subordinated to or circumscribed by the commerce body. That, presumably, is to be left to the framers of the legislation that will be necessary to make the Coal Commission's suggestion effective. The Coal Commission does, however, go so far as to indicate the general punitive method by which the coal control body shall make its powers felt in the industry. It is in this particular more than in any other that the coal industry finds objection to the recommendation of the Coal Commission.

Giving the coal control body authority and power to regulate the production of coal by an arbitrary granting or withholding of transportation to mine, is vicious in principle and violative of the spirit of fair play and a square deal as practiced by American business. It places a mine owner wholly at the mercy of a governmental agency with respect to the regularity of operation of his plant which it is conceivable might, under certain circumstances, be more destructive of profits than the delays and interruptions now or formerly the result of deficiencies in car service and supply. To the extent that operation is restricted by the proposed new method of withholding transportation, to that extent will employees be deprived of their earnings and the often heard grievance of irregular working time and short pay will again plague the industry.

Further, the suggested method of control is substituting the dictum of a governmental agency for the law of supply and demand which, when given free operation, has everywhere, always and in every branch of business been the most effective regulator of prices. That every effort to regulate prices by legislative act has been a signal failure is a matter of record, as many lines of business and industry know to their sorrow and loss.

In the Coal Commission's report and recommendations special care appears to have been taken to lay upon the producers, dealers and consumers of coal the whole burden of affecting reforms in the industry. With no less care has labor been omitted from consideration as having responsibilities and duties at least equal to those of the employers. To the public, as also to the operators, this is a manifestly unfair plan by which to solve the problems of the coal industry in such a manner that all parties at interest will be required to contribute their just and proper share of constructive effort.

If the coal industry is to be regulated it should be regulated in all its shape and in every department.

Oklahoma has a Ruhr problem of its own which may yet prove to be a forerunner for one or other of the groups of regulators.

At the Theatres

The Paramount

Herbert Rawlinson, who has won the underworld a lot more sympathy than it probably deserves by the human quality that he has displayed in the many crack parts that he has portrayed on the screen, will be seen in the role far ahead from the type in which he is so well known at the Paramount theatre today and Thursday.

The Universal star makes his bow to the motion picture public in the role of a knight of the squared circle. The title of the play is "The Victor," so there's no masking the outcome of his astic engagements. He wins the crown hands down.

The Hon. Cecil Fitzhugh Waring is the "titled moultier" under which he battles and despite the handicap of his being a penniless member of the British aristocracy he wields a left hook that is a terror to all opposition.

Rawlinson is a wonderful all-around athlete and a clever boxer, but this is his first screen appearance in a prize-fight role.

"The Victor" was adapted to the screen by E. Richard Schayer, well known scenarist, from the popular magazine story by Gerald Beaumont.

The Soisson

"SLANDER THE WOMAN." Allen Holubar's First National release, starring Dorothy Phillips, at the Soisson today, is one of the strongest indictments of gossip and gossiping that has ever been produced.

When it was first selected as Miss Phillips' starring vehicle, it was not picked because it portrayed one of the principal evils which confronts society today. Rather, it was selected because it permitted an excellent opportunity for Miss Phillips to display her rare emotional qualities. However, the indictment of gossiping was already in the script when it reached Director Holubar's hands, and he has taken advantage of every opportunity to show what his tongue can do to a woman's reputation.

Miss Phillips is supported by an admirable cast. The picture was produced in Los Angeles and the California mountains, and contains some of the most superb outdoor snow scenes that have ever been photographed.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday "The Man From Glengarry."

The Orpheum

Bebe Daniels, co-star with Antonio Moreno in the Paramount picture, "The Exciters," which is at the Orpheum Theatre, adds her stock of shoes growing rapidly. She uses a couple of pairs to every gown in her Paramount photoplays, because, as she says, "shoes, stockings and hats are the most important assets to a dress."

"Let me choose my shoes and stockings," comments Miss Daniels, "and someone else can pick out my gowns, for all I care."

She asserts that she finds use for every pair of shoes in her possession, for Miss Daniels does not want the public to think for a minute that this is a mania with her.

"The Exciters" is a comedy drama, bringing Miss Daniels to the screen in the dual role of her career. Cyril Ring, Burr McIntosh and Diana Allen are included in the supporting cast. John Colton, author of the stage success, "Rain," wrote the scenario in conjunction with Sonya Levien who will be remembered for her excellent adaptation of Allen Brady's recent starring vehicle, "The Snow Bride."

Maureen Campbell directed. Thursday, "The Silent Partner."

When Sam, reaching the office after his journey, opened the door, this clerk, John Peters by name, was seated on a high stool, holding in one hand a half-eaten sausage, in the other an extraordinarily large and powerful revolver. At the sight of Sam he laid down both engines of destruction and beamed. He was not a particularly successful beamer, being hampered by a cast in one eye which gave him a truculent and sinister look; but those who knew him knew that he had a heart of gold and were not intimidated by his repellent face. Between Sam and himself there had always existed terms of cordiality, starting from the time when the former was a small boy, and it had been John Peters' mission to take him now to the Zoo, now to the train back to school.

"Why, Mr. Samuel!"
"Hello, Peters!"
"We were expecting you back a week ago. So you got back safe?"
"Safe? Why, of course," Peters shook his head.

"I confess that, when there was this delay in your coming here, I sometimes feared something might have happened to you. I recall mentioning it to the young lady who recently did me the honor to promise to become my wife."

"Ocean liners aren't often wrecked nowadays."

"I was thinking more of the braves on shore. America's a dangerous country. But perhaps you were not in touch with the underworld?"

"I don't think I was."

"Ah!" said John Peters, significantly.

He took up the revolver, gave it a fond and almost paternal look, and replaced it on the desk.

"What on earth are you doing with that thing?" asked Sam.

Mr. Peters lowered his voice.

"In going to America myself in a few days' time, Mr. Samuel, it's my annual holiday, and the governor's sending me over with papers in connection with the People v. Schultz and Bowes. It's a big case over there. A client of mine is mixed up in it, an American gentleman. I am to take these important papers to his legal representative in New York. So I thought it best to be prepared."

The first smile that he had permitted himself in nearly two weeks flitted across Sam's face.

"What on earth sort of a place do you think New York is?" he asked. "It's safer than London."

"Ah, but what about the underworld? I've seen those American films that they send over here. Mr. Samuel, every Saturday night regular I take my young lady to a cinema, and I tell you, they teach you something. Did you ever see 'Wolves of the Bowery'? There was a man in that in 'just my position, carrying important papers, and what they didn't try to do to him! No, I'm taking no chances, Mr. Samuel!"

"I should have said you were, judging that thing about with you."

Mr. Peters seemed wounded.

"Oh, I understand the mechanism perfectly, and I am becoming a very fair shot. I take my little bite of food in here early and go and practice at the Rupert street rifle range during my lunch hour. You'd be surprised how quickly one picks it up. When I get home at night I try how quick I can draw. You have to draw like a flash of lightning, Mr. Samuel. If you'd ever seen a film called 'Two-Gun Thomas' you'd realize that. You haven't time to be loitering about."

"I haven't," agreed Sam. "Is my father in?"

"I'd like to see him if he's not busy."

Mr. Peters recalled to his professional duties, shed his sinister front like a garment. He picked up a speaking tube and blew down it.

"Mr. Samuel to see you, Mr. Malby. Yes, sir, very good. Will you go right in, Mr. Samuel?"

Sam proceeded to the inner office, and found his father dictating into the attentive ear of Miss Milliken, his elderly and respectable stenographer, regarding his morning mail.

The entire which occurred the lawyer's professional stamping ground did not extend to his person. Mr. Malby Marlowe was a dapper little man, with a round, cheerful face and a bright eye. His morning coat had been cut by London's best tailor, and his trousers perfectly crossed by a sedulous valet. A pink carnation in his buttonhole matched his healthy complexion. His golf handicap was twelve. His sister, Mrs. Horace Hignett, considered him worldly.

"Good morning, father."

"Very glad to see you're back, Sam. So you didn't win?"

"No, I got beaten in the semi-finals. American amateurs are a very hot lot: the best ones. I suppose you were weak on the greens. I warned you about that."

"Yes, life is real, life is earnest," he said, gazing at Sam seriously, "and the grave is not our goal. Lives of great men all round us we can make our lives sublime. In fact, it's time you took off your coat and started to work."

"I am quite ready, father."

"You didn't hear what I said," exclaimed Mr. Malby with a look of surprise. "I said it was time you began work."

"And I said I was quite ready."

"Bless my soul! You've changed your views a trifle since I saw you last."

"I have changed them altogether."

CHAPTER X

At about the time when Sam Marlowe was having the momentous interview with his father, described in the last chapter, Mr. Rufus Bennett woke from an after-lunch nap in Mrs. Hignett's delightful old-world mansion, Wudles, in the county of Hampshire. He had gone to his room after lunch, because there seemed nothing else to do. It was still raining hard, so that a ramble in the picturesque garden was impossible, and the only alternative to sleep, the society of Mr. Henry Mortimer, had been one peculiarly distasteful to Mr. Bennett.

Much has been written of great friendships between man and man, friendships which women can never destroy. Rufus Bennett had always believed that his friendship for Mr. Mortimer was of this order. They had been boys together in the same small town, and had kept together in after years. They had been Damon and Pythias, David and Jonathan. But never till now had they been coupled up together in an English country house in the middle of a bad patch of English summer weather. So this afternoon Mr. Bennett, in order to avoid his lifelong friend, had gone to bed.

He awoke now with a start, and a moment later realized what it was that had aroused him. There was music in the air. The room was full of it. It seemed to be coming up through the floor and rolling about in chunks all round his bed. He blinked the last fragments of sleep out of his system, and became filled with a restless irritability.

He rang the bell violently, and presently there entered a grave, thin, intellectual man who looked like a duke, only more respectable. This was Webster, Mr. Bennett's English valet.

"Is that Mr. Mortimer?" he barked, as the door opened.

"No, sir, it is I—Webster." Not even the annoyance of being summoned like this from an absorbing game of penny snap in the housekeeper's room had the power to make the valet careless of his grammar. "I fancied that I heard your bell ring, sir."

"I wonder you could hear anything with that infernal noise going on," snapped Mr. Bennett. "Is Mr. Mortimer playing that—that d-d gas-engine in the drawing room?"

"Yes, sir, 'Toot's Good-by.' A charming air, sir."

"Charming air be—I tell him to stop it."

"Very good, sir."

The valet withdrew like a duke leaving the royal presence, but actually walking backwards, but giving the impression of doing so. Mr. Bennett lay in bed and fumed. Presently the valet returned. The music still continued to roll about the room.

"I am sorry to have to inform you, sir," said Webster, "that Mr. Mortimer declines to accede to your request."

"Oh, he said that, did he?"

"That is the gist of his remarks, sir."

"Did you tell him I was trying to get to sleep?"

"Yes, sir. I understood him to reply that he should worry and get a pain in the neck."

"Go down again and say that I insist on his stopping the thing. It's an outrage."

"Very good, sir."

In a few minutes Webster, like the dove dispatched from the Ark, was back again.

"I fear my mission has been fruitless, sir. Mr. Mortimer appears adamant on the point at issue."

"You gave him my message?"

"Verbatim, sir. In reply Mr. Mortimer desired me to tell you that, if you did not like it, you could do the other thing. I quote the exact words, sir."

"He did, did he?"

"Yes, sir."

"Very good! Webster!"

Lerew Points His Team For Game on Saturday With Duquesne Univ. Hi

Cokers Realize Their Shortcomings and Will Endeavor to Do Better.

TORNADOES LOOK GOOD

Coach Joseph E. Lerew this afternoon began real work in preparation for the game here Saturday afternoon between the Conneltsville High School and the Duquesne University High School. After a light work-out Monday the team was given heavier duties yesterday but today marks the toughest period of the week so far. The Duquesne University team is conceded to be much stronger than the Youngwood aggregation which played here Saturday. It is needless to say that the locals realize their short-comings and will be in the game with more determination than ever. The squad still attains good size and the coaches intend to give every man a chance. "The best man wins" is the slogan in the Coker camp and a merry chase is on for honors. Those without the courage to face competition are dropping out but others, with the spirit of the school flaming high within them, will stick out the season.

Of Interest to Fans.
The Pittsburgh Pirates defeated Philadelphia 18-5 in a lop-sided game at Forbes Field yesterday. The Pirates had an opportunity to try out a number of youngsters. Ray Stenecker pitched the entire contest. A new shortstop, first baseman and outfielder were given an opportunity to show their wares. The game with the Phils today rings down the curtain at Forbes Field for the season.

The New York Giants practically clinched the 1923 pennant yesterday when they defeated Cincinnati, 3-2. The Giants must win only one more of their remaining five games to come out on top regardless of whether Cincinnati wins all its remaining games.

Sand-lot football is gaining daily. Several vacant lots on the South Side, as well as in the other sections of the city are being utilized by the youthful players and many a star may be in the development stage right now.

star last season, and former member of the Georgetown University football team, will be stronger this season than ever before. The independent Coker aggregation, which has been attracting increased attention each season is sure to write its name in fame this fall. There is a big field of candidates and all are men worthy of producing. The U. P. O. Elks, backing the team this season, will see that it gets efficient management and only the best teams will be brought here for games.

Golf Dangerous To Man Above 50

LONDON, Sept. 26.—The death of A. R. Smith, secretary of Dover College, who succumbed while playing golf, has revived discussion of the age at which golfers should retire. Mr. Smith was 62 and was the 12th English golfer past middle life to die on the links this year. Some British physicians contend that 50 is the game's danger mark.

They say that the arteries have become rigid at this age and that club swinging is likely to be fatal.

These people do not know their loss in being without a banking home. If you are not depositing your money in a bank, you are not caring for your future as you should. Place your money in the Citizens National Bank of Conneltsville where it will earn money for you as you are earning for someone.—Advertisement.—25-30 Sept.
